Mighty Nimrods in Africa.

From the Paris Dispatch to the London Daily Tele-"Lion hunting made easy," might be the motto employed by M. Cattier, a bold colonist of Algeria. He has taken up the succession of the late M. Bombonnel, who died a few days ago in Dijon, after having been for the greater guns on the scene, in addition to the Amphion part of his existence a mighty Nimrod in the North African jungles and deserts. If we are to credit the testimony of those who know the colony well it is an error to suppose that there are no lions in Algeria. On the contrary, the "monarchs of the desert" abound in the forests of Bona and in the gorges of Palestro. M. Cattier is "running" his lion-hunting business at Palestro, and is doing his best to work up a connection, not only among gentleman who may wish to accompany him in his expeditions, but also among ladies. Here is a splendid cpening at once for the "modern woman" who dares do all that man does. M. Cattier has inscribed his business cards with a notice to the effect of Halifax have been received from England by the military authorities. They are as follows: First, No citizen will be admitted to any fort unless he is on business and must then be accompanied by a military officer. Third, Military officers in plain clothes will not be admitted to the day and the solution of the vacant skulls with deep prompted freaks of buriesque millinery, such as the trimming of the vacant skulls with deep frills of lace. One poor shade lay in purple stockings and white kid gloves! A princess—an order from the commandant.

Steamers Without Masts do all that man does. M. Cattier has inscribed his business cards with a notice to the effect that in his hunting rendezvous are to be found hons of the Atlas Mountains, panthers, jackals and other wild beasts, and that his establishment is provided with a special refuge or shelter for the weaker sex. The property on which M. Cattier has organized his happy hunting ground was bequeathed to him—so far as the rights of chase are concerned—by his friend Bombonnel, at whose disposal it was placed by dispersed with as they are in the way. Bobby's Punishment.

From the Bostonian.

Mother—"Bobby, the teacher sends word to me that you are a very bad boy. You don't learn your lessons and you are late at school and you whisper and play during school hours. Now, what shall I do with you?" Bobby—"I'm pretty wicked, ain't I?" Mother—"Yes, Bobby, you are." Bobby—"Well, mamma, if you've got to do something with me, you'd better let me go to the circus. I know seven other very wicked boys who are going."

You encumber a boat with useless sticks just because she runs a few thousand miles outside of Sandy Hook? You will find that the masts are going to go, take my word for it."

At 11 o'clock Sunday night a fatal explosion occurred in La Esperanza silver mine in Pachusa, state of Hidalgo, Mexico, in which nine men were seriously injured and two killed outright. Of the injured seven more have died. It was announced in the house of lords yesterday that the government did not intend to work the telephone lines, but it was prepared to license companies for that purpose.

CLOUDS OF BUTTERFLIES.

What a Mountain Climber Encountered Far Above the Snow Line. In a bulletin just issued by the division of entomology, Agricultural Department, Mr. C. L. Hopkins writes: During an ascent of Mount Shasta, made in August, 1889, a most interesting occurrence was noted in the flight of countless myriads of butterflies (Vanessa californica) at an altitude far above snow line. In our early morning climb of August 29 of the above year we had left our horses at 4:30 at what is known as "Horse Camp," at very snow fields close about us. Our progress was very slow and tedious, being all of the time almost smooth, hard frozen surface of the icy snow, and which latter did not soften till long after the sun had swung high enough to shine full upon it. Some little time after daylight, but long before we could see the sun, as he was hidden from us by the high crest of a sharp ridge on the southwest aspect of the moun-tain (our ascent being made from Sissons west of the mountain), a few signs of insect life were seen in the share of "snow flows" life were seen in the shape of "snow fleas," two or three large-winged grasshoppers and, occasionally at first, a butterfly. The last two were stiffened by the cold as if they were there from the day previous. The latter insect in-creased much in numbers as we ascended, and were many of them found in among and under the loose stones as well as a few upon them.

At perhaps 9:30 we came to a point upon which the sun had long been shining, and here they were flying in the air, the flight being in a southeasterly direction. From here they seemed to increase very rapidly in numbers up the remainder of the ascent to well toward the summit. The latter was reached at 11:20 a.m.; the temperature was noted at 42° I ah. in the open air. We remained here about half an hour, then passed down by the way of the Hot Sulphur Springs and then out on the southerly face of the mountain. We again encountered our beautiful friends at not farther than six or eight hundred feet below the extreme peak, and now in countless numbers, filling the air with their flashing wings and all passing in the same direction as observed during the ascent toward the southeast. This strange sight continued until we seemed to pass below them at an altitude of between 11,000 and 12,000 feet. The fact of its being a continuous flight of these insects across the mountain in one direction during the warm part of the day-a period of nearly five hours—is beyond question. That it was in progress one or more days previous to that upon which I observed it is an easy deduction from the fact of the numbers of the insects found among the rocks and stones while yet stiffened by the cold of the night air. How much longer it may have continued I had no means of knowing.

Where they could have come from, in such wast numbers, and what brought them to such a high altitude is of course a matter of pure speculation.

TESTING A NEW SEWERAGE PLAN The Chemical Precipitation Process Promises Good Results in Worcester.

From the Worcester Spy.

A trial of the new sewage purification works on Wednesday afternoon was entirely satisfactory and gives reason for the confident belief that the sewage problem, so vexations and formidable to the city government and people of Worcester for many years, has at length been solved.

The apparatus and process have been more than once described, but we may say here briefly that the plant consists mainly of a senear snow line, where there were many small ries of large open tanks or basins, solidly constructed of brick, and having a combined surface area of about an acre, and a building in over loose, sliding fr., mentary rocks, or the which are a mill for grinding the chemicals and vats in which these chemicals, after being ground, are mixed with a small quantity of crude sewage. This mixture is thence dis-charged into the stream which flows from the sewers into the brick basins, where the chemicals, chiefly lime, combine with some of the impurities, forming a coagulum, which, as it set-ties, carries with it to the bottom of the basin the other impurities, leaving the clarified sew-age almost as clear and limpid as pure spring water. This clarified sewage is then allowed to flow off into the river, where our friends in the valley below are expected to find it wholly unobjectionable and the sludge is drawn off from below and deposited on land adjacent to the works, where it will be plowed under and is expected to cause no detriment to the health or comfort of the neighborhood. The basins are so constructed that all may be used simultaneously, or the flow of sewage may be cut off from any one or more of them for removing the sludge, for cleansing or repairs. When the system is in practical operation one of the ba-sins will probably be empty or in the process of emptying, while the others are in use.

On Wednesday, for the first time, the sewage was turned into the new works, and the first trial was made in America on a large scale for the process of chemical precipitation for purifying sewage. The discharge from the sewer flowed into the basin, a dark, foul, noisome flood. One tank was filled; the stream was shut off, and in half an hour water dipped from the basin was clear, without odor and with only the slightest possible trace of discoloration. This very gratifying result, after the sewage had settled for half an hour only in one tank, justifies the confident belief that after passing in succession through several tanks, with opportunity for further settlement in each, the effluent will be as free from all objectionable matter as could be desired. This, however, is only the first trial of the new process. Further experiments will be necessary to determine the best combination of chemicals, and the proper quantity to make the pro-cess most efficient with the least expense, and other conditions which will best secure the efficient and economical operation of the works. These experiments will be made carefully and their results used to bring the new system int uniform operation.

The cost has been less than it was at first feared that it would be. The total appropriation was about $135,000, of which not all has yet been expended. More than half of this sum was for the cost of the outfall sewer from June 3, with a complement of sixteen officers and men to each boat. The start from Sheerness was made June 7. The two boats sailed from Plymouth with the troopship Tyne June 13 and made Queenstown, after a rough passage, the next day, June 14. They encountered a rough gale coming over and No. 61 broke her hawser Jun 22.

Life on board the torpedo boats, according to those who came over in them, is decidedly not all beer and skittles. To begin with, the free-board of the boats is so low that any sea larger all beer and skittles. To begin with, the free-board of the boats is so low that any sea larger than a ripple is fairly certain to wash down fore and aft. Cooking in bad weather was found impossible. At one period of the voyage boat No. 62 made five feet of water every two hours.

Torpedo boats Nos. 61 and 62, which are in many respects similar to the United States torpedo boat Cushing, were built by Yarrow & Co. at Poplar. London, in 1886. They are one hundred and twenty-five feet in length and thirteen feet in breadth, and have a trial displacement of sixty-two tons. They draw forward one foot seven inches, aft six feet three inches. They have a coal capacity of eighteen tons and can develop a speed of nineteen knots and about six hundred and fifty indicated horse power. Their armament consists of five torpedo guns, two two-barreled Nordenfeldt guns, and they carry an electric search light. The Tyne brought out eighty men for the West Riding regiment.

Steamers Without Masts.

From the New York Herald.

"The next evolution in the steamer way," said a wise old man of the sea, "will probably be steamers without masts. The sticks that they now put into the twin-screw flyers now are useless ornaments and might as well be are useless ornaments and might as well be dispensed with as the rights of chase are concerned—by his friend Bombonnel, at whose disposal it was placed by the government in order to facilitate his zoological researches, or, rather, what may literally be called "pursuits."

To Stay Away From.

From Harper's Bazar.

A young "lawyer" whose love of ease makes practice distasteful, and whose ample purse makes it unnecessary, excused himself from a luncheon party the other day, saying: "I must go to my office." Said the hostess laughingly: "We didn't know you had an office." "Not have an office!" he replied. "Why, if I didn't, what would I have to stay away from?"
